Why We Build Rowan Moore

Why We Build. We are living in the most dramatic period in architectural history in more than half a century: a time when cityscapes are being redrawn on a yearly basis, architects are testing the very idea of what a building is, and whole cities are being invented overnight in exotic locales or here in the United States.

Why We Build by Rowan Moore - review. As he tours the world, Moore dips into themes. He guides us through the relationship between architecture and eroticism, power and finance in a journey from São Paulo to New York, Beijing and beyond. The more eccentric the destination, the more amusing is the language.

Why We Build: Power and Desire in Architecture: Rowan ...

In a series of interconnected essays, Moore explores the unquenchable human urge to reshape the world through building: as an expression of power or poetry, wealth, hope, endurance or sexual mores. If this inevitably covers old ground, it does so with unfailingly fresh insight.

Why We Build by Rowan Moore: review - Telegraph

In Why We Build Rowan Moore shows how buildings are driven by human emotions and desires - such as hope, power, money, sex, and the idea of home - and how buildings then shape our experiences. He explores the making of buildings from conception to inhabitation, and reveals the paradoxical power of architecture: it looks fixed and solid, but is always changing, in response to the lives around it.

You wouldn't automatically expect to read the phrase, "gooey blossoms the colour of vulvas" in a book on architecture. But Why We Build by Rowan Moore has plenty more verbal surprises from surreal to sarcastic, and once, in a long, unpunctuated list of things, poetically experimental.

Why We Build by Rowan Moore: review - Telegraph

"Studious and serious, with meaningful insights on where we are going in the future. . . . In today's world of flip journalism, Rowan Moore is refreshing." - Frank Gehry "A vivid account. . . Stimulat[es] the reader." - Wall Street Journal "Rowan Moore. . . can build: He is trained in the craft himself.

Buildings are driven by human emotions and desires; hope, power, money, sex, the idea of home. In Why We Build Rowan Moore explores the making of buildings from conception to inhabitation and reveals the paradoxical power of architecture: it looks fixed and solid, but is always changing in response to the lives around it.

Why We Build by Rowan Moore - panmacmillan.com

Moore opts for adaptability, a certain laissez-faire within buildings outwardly defined by upright classical rectitude. This extends to most of the places described in the book, and Why We Build is nothing if not broad.

Why We Build by Rowan Moore - review | Books | The Guardian

Quotes by Rowan Moore. "Architecture is shaped by human emotions and desires, and then becomes a setting for further emotions and desires. It goes from the animate and inanimate and back again. For this reason it is always incomplete, or rather is only completed by the lives in and around it.

Moore, a trained architect and former director of the Architecture Foundation in London theorizes about the relationship of buildings to emotions. As a critic, he calls his contemporaries on their mistakes, and is humanistic in doing so, saving his praise for those (too few) who have honored the context of their projects.
